Classical music for all generations, free admission

The charming Alpine town of Kitzbühel invites you once again to a melodious journey through the seasons. The Kitzbühel concert series "Four Seasons," which makes classical music accessible to all generations, continues its successful course.

The concert series, consisting of four concerts annually - one for each season, focuses on accessibility. Each event begins with a brief introduction to the musical program and an introduction of the artists. Admission is free to make classical music listening accessible to everyone. The concept, designed by the Italian Ludovica Rossi Purini, aims to bring classical music closer to a broad audience, especially young people and families. Responsible for the implementation is the experienced Marielle Haidacher, former cultural representative and councilor of the city of Kitzbühel.

Two upcoming concerts in Kitzbühel

The kickoff at the Kitzbühel Museum last October during the "Long Night of Museums" was a great success. A young trio from the Udine Conservatory captivated the audience with classical music from the 19th century to the present. The winter concert on February 24, 2024, at the State Music School was performed by the Quartetto Spirito Veneziano. The program included masterpieces by Joseph Haydn, Antonín Dvořák, and Ludwig van Beethoven.

The spring concert on April 12, 2024, at the Franziskanerkirche will feature Linus Roth (violin) and Petrit Çeku (classical guitar). Antonio Vivaldi's "Four Seasons" will be the centerpiece of this special evening. For the summer concert in July, the choir of the "Almo Collegio Borromeo" from Pavia is invited - a suitable venue is still being sought.

The Kitzbühel concert series "Four Seasons" is a cultural enrichment for the city and its residents. Music lovers are warmly invited to attend these unique concert evenings and enjoy the diversity of classical music amidst the picturesque backdrop of Kitzbühel.
